fingerpocket.

The massage ring for your fingers. fingerpocket promotes perfusion when you roll the rings individually over your fingers with slight pressure. This helps warm up in sports, protects against injuries and can accelerate regeneration and effectively relieve pain in case of injury. The rings are therefore often used by physiotherapists and occupational therapists during treatment as well. In addition, the fascia of your fingers are massaged. This is good for flexibility and promotes concentration and focus.

fingerpocket.

fingerpocket is available in two colour variants. The rings in the set differ in hardness.
A handy cotton bag for storage is included.

armpocket.

The massage ring for your arms. armpocket is a large fascia ring that massages your forearm. This helps to accelerate the removal of pesky lactate during training. This allows you to continue sooner, whether during boulder training, weight training, or before the next attempt to pass through your project. armpocket is a versatile alternative to a foam roll – it alleviates wrist pain, dissolves adhesions and promotes the healing process of muscle injuries of the arms by increasing the blood perfusion.
